3. Appendix I

3.1 Types of Discrimination

The Equality Act 2010 extends the scope of conduct prohibited in relation to the protected characteristics. The following provides an overview of what is included within the legislation.

3.2 Direct Discrimination

Direct discrimination occurs when someone is treated less favourably than another person because of a protected characteristic they have or are thought to have, or because they associate with someone who has a protected characteristic.

3.3 Indirect Discrimination

Indirect discrimination can occur when a condition, rule, policy or even a practice applies to everyone but particularly disadvantages people who share a protected characteristic.

3.4 Harassment

Harassment is 'unwanted conduct related to a relevant protected characteristic, which has the purpose or effect of violating an individual's dignity or creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for that individual'. Protection includes harassment because of perception and association.

3.5 Victimisation

Victimisation occurs when a person is treated badly because they have made or supported a complaint or raised a grievance under the Equality Act; or because they are suspected of doing so. A person is not protected from victimisation if they have maliciously made or supported an untrue complaint. There is no longer a need to compare treatment of a complainant with that of a person who has not made or supported a complaint under the Act.

3.6 Discrimination by Association

This is direct discrimination against someone because they associate with another person who possesses a protected characteristic.

3.7 Discrimination by Perception

This is direct discrimination against an individual because others think they possess a particular protected characteristic. It applies even if the person does not actually possess that characteristic.

3.8 Third Party harassment

The Equality Act makes an organisation potentially liable for harassment of their employees by people (third parties) who are not employees of the company, such as visitors or parents. The organisation will only be liable when harassment has occurred on at least two previous occasions, and they are aware that it has taken place, and have not taken reasonable steps to prevent it from happening again
